Power outages are part of daily life in Iraq, but older generations can vividly recall a bygone era under the previous regime when electricity was stable and consistent. Before the 1980s, Iraq boasted one of the most developed energy sectors in the region.

When it comes to oil, Iraq's production has grown, according to the International Energy Agency, but the country has struggled to capture and process natural gas, leaving its electric system vulnerable. "The main pain point in the country is the power shortage," Mohsen said.

Foreign help is not enough to fix energy issues, domestic reform is necessary. This past July, Iraq and France's TotalEnergies finalized the Gas Growth Integrated Project, a $27 billion energy deal aimed at Iraq's natural resources and improving the country's electricity supply.
